panda: pangenome annotations data analysis

Warning Messages

With impg 0.2.0 it is normal to get a warning message stating:

`thread 'main' panicked at src/main.rs:205:56:`

`Target name not found in index`

This is related to the behaviour of `wfmash` who, given to fastas A and B, does not align both A vs B and B vs A but instead only aligns A vs B.

TODO

Retrieve the sequences of each block and save them? Probably this is not a wise thing to do. With the nnew output format it is easy to do this on the fly.

Input Files and Formats

The input files are: 1) an alignment, 2) the annotations of the contigs aligned, 3) a properly (priority) sorted list of ids.

The alignment file is in paf format. The delimiter (see https://github.com/pangenome/PanSN-spec) is "#". The annotations are in gff format. The file are named using the "-" separator. E.g. in the alignment we may have in line 1 and column 1: "SGDref#0#chrI". The corresponding annotations file is named "SGDref-0-features.gff" and it reports all the annotations for all the corresponding contigs.

Quick Run

Before running the markdown remember to:

- check the input data folder of the annotation files (`dir_anno`)
- check all chunks with `eval = FALSE`
- make a copy of the input alignment in paf format ("/.../aln/graph-name.paf")
- make the input ("/.../ids/ids-ps.txt") file with the ids (e.g. "SGDref-0", "AIF-1", "AIF-2") of the strains used to build the graph induced from the alignment
- choose if mitochondrial features should be used (attached to the first available haplotype)

Analysis

the vector with the strain-haplotypes ids
declare -a gff_ids
file_ids="${dir_base}/ids/ids-ps.txt"
while IFS="\n" read -r one_line; do
    gff_ids+=("${one_line}")
done < "${file_ids}"

for strainhaplo_id in "${gff_ids[@]}"; do path_gff=$(find "${dir_anno}" -name "${strainhaplo_id}*gff")
  name_gff=$(basename "${path_gff}")
  strain_id=$(basename "${path_gff}" | cut -f 1 -d "-") # e.g. ADE mito_name="${strain_id}-mt-features.gff"
  path_mito_gff=$(find "${dir_anno}" -name "${mito_name}")
  gff_type=$(basename "${path_gff}" | cut -f 2 -d "-") # e.g. 0 or 1
  if [[ "${with_mito}" == "TRUE" && \
        -f "${path_mito_gff}" && \
        "${asse_type}" != "2" ]]; then cat <(grep -v "^#" "${path_gff}") <(grep -v "^#" "${path_mito_gff}") \
    > "${dir_out}/${name_gff}"
  else
    grep -v "^#" "${path_gff}" > "${dir_out}/${name_gff}"
  fi
done

Here we transform the annotation files in gff format to bed files (without header, otherwise impg crashes). The format of the annotations file for the reference genome are slightly different compared to the phenovar data. So we have to process them separately.

We invoke impg through a system command to compute the features pangenome. Then we remove the redundancy generated by impg by checking the overlap of the regions computed by impg. To do this, every annotation interval is used to generate a block of homology. Each block of homology is decomposed in sub-blocks which are defined by a feature class. The reduced (i.e. nonredundant) sub-block is then transformed (i.e. formatted) and appended to output.
